Green Heart Action Plan

Problem Definition/ Problem Statement

Not all students here can eat during weekends or on weekdays at home. Also, there is a lot of litter in Dunwoody. Even with the food stamps being canceled, food prices are still high, and things like eggs can even cost up to 6 - 10$, which may not seem like a lot but can be heavy on families already struggling with the cost of daily necessities.

Root Cause of the Problem

Struggles in the economy and the recent government shutdown, managing finances is a huge part of this, and helping people in Dunwoody is something we can do to help the less fortunate in Dunwoody.

List at Least Three Credible Resources that support your problem statement

We will use the news because they spread main issues about the government.
Additionally, Britannica provides information for kids struggling with these issues.
Many news platforms will be our resources we could also talk to kids who are struggling with that issue as well, Like CNN 10.

Proposed Solution

Building a greenhouse at our school, where people can grow their own food to take home. Additionally, we can have a recycling bin that students at our school can use. We are positive that it will make a huge impact in our community, even saving people money.

How We Will Measure Our Success

How many people have we helped in our community, meaning counting the number of people that we have helped, and SGA can also be a huge part of this, along with their canned food drive.

Who are the Decision Makers We Need to Reach

The principal and the superintendent, as well as the people of our school, can help us get to the people we need, including the gardening club and SGA.

Our 3-5 Step Plan for Change

- Get permission
- Get blueprints
- Get funding
- And find the perfect spot
- Start building

Impact & Equity

People will get food so they can eat over the weekends, take care of our environment, and make our school a better place. Cost levels of groceries can be up to 300 dollars, but with help from our community, we can help people eat.
